Shower Screens

Frameless glass shower doors and enclosures are now a typical feature within many hotels and leisure centres, but also work equally well within domestic bathroom applications.

An all glass shower enclosure removes the design limitations present in a typical framed system. Visible ironmongery is reduced to an absolute minimum and by using clear acrylic seals you are left with a totally frameless glass enclosure/screen.

Where possible, the channel required for a fixed screen would be set within the wall covering, always contact us in the stages of design to achieve the most frameless finish possible.

A frameless enclosure lends itself particularly well to special applications, and systems can be designed to suit virtually any size of shower tray or bath.
